Dr. Boyd Congratulates
R. S. A. Buglers On Oshawa Victory

The R.S.A. Bugle Band covered itself with glory at Oshawa on Saturday.

The occasion was the annual band competition of the Protestant Flute Band, Oshawa.

The Newmarket organization won the McLaughlin trophy, for first place for appearance, first place for marching and playing, and first in the Bugle Band B class.

Following the return of the band to town on Saturday night, Mayor Dr. S. J. Boyd made an announcement to the crowd on Main St. and presented the trophies to Clyde Adams, mascot of the band. The band played one or two numbers in reply.

Hill Boys Get Scattered Hits, And Still Less Runs

Playing errorless ball behind the effective pitching of Wes. Niles, Newmarket Redmen romped home with an eight to one decision over Richmond Hill at the latter's home diamond on Tuesday evening.

The Reds started off with a bang, scoring three runs in the first inning and adding the odd one or two to their total during the remaining innings to bring their total to eight.

The Richmond Hill club were held to five scattered hits during the nine-inning game and couldn't break down the defensive barrier bolstered by the Newmarketers.

The game itself was a typical Richmond Hill-Newmarket tussle with keen interest being displayed by both clubs in a clean and sportsmanlike manner.

Jack McCaffrey's Mammoth Bloom Steals Peony Show

First Flower Show Marked
By Splendid
Peonies

One of the finest flower shows held in recent years was the peony show at St. Paul's parish hall on Saturday afternoon. The flowers were unusually fine and public interest was keen.

High spot of the show was Jack McCaffrey's entry from which the sweepstake winner for best single peony bloom in the show was selected. This flower had a diameter of over eight inches.

Mrs. Ed. Brammer took the sweepstake for the best rose in the show. Arthur Fildes won the prize for the best display of peonies, not less than six varieties. There were four wonderful entries in this class. Miss L. Newton was second. Elgin Perrin and Wilmet Hill, less fortunate, had beautiful entries.

There were several children's entries in the wild flower and bird-house classes. Alex. Webster, secretary of the Horticultural Society, told The Era that entries for these two classes would be accepted for the July and September shows, although not included in the printed prize list.

Mrs. John Klees, Aurora, was the very acceptable and capable judge of the show.

Results of the show are: peonies, best three blooms, white, cream or yellow: Miss L. Newton, Mrs. Ed. Brammer; flesh, bluish or light pink: J. J. McCaffrey, James Gibney; deep pink: D. Judd, Aurora, Mrs. Ed. Brammer; red: Elgin Perrin, Mrs. Ed. Brammer; fancy variety, 2nd, Miss L. Newton; any variety, Mrs. Ed. Brammer, Miss L. Newton; any variety, named, open to exhibitors never before having won a peony prize, Mrs. Auley Brennar, Queensville.

Best single bloom, J. J. McCaffrey. Best collection, not less than three varieties, Mrs. Ed. Brammer, D. Judd, Aurora. Best collection, fancy varieties, Elgin Perrin, Miss L. Newton. Best display, Arthur Fildes, Miss L. Newton.

TEXTILE FIRM ARE LOOKING FOR HELP

Toronto textile men are planning to start business in Newmarket shortly, employing 25 girls. They met with members of the town's industrial committee on Monday afternoon. They didn't ask any concessions, but asked the committee for information about help available here. If they decide to come, they will probably take over the I. O. O. F. hall, now leased to another Toronto textile firm.

The band was taken to Oshawa by Roy Rhinehart and Wm. Andrews. The third leader, Frank Smith, was unable to make the trip, but was plenty happy when he heard the news.

INVITE VETERANS

The committee in charge of Veterans Day, July 9, during Aurora's Old Home Week celebrations, invites all veterans and their families to join with them. They are asked to bring their lunch.

There will be races for children, a ladies' softball tournament and a big parade at night.

played by both clubs in a clean and sportsmanlike manner.

The Newmarket club has suffered but one defeat to date this season and have played two tie games with the Aurora club. The game this Thursday night with Aurora finishes up the schedule (with the exception of the postponed games) and it promises to be a thriller from beginning to end. Fans will all want to be on hand for this important tussle.

DENIES POLICE ARE TOO VINDICTIVE

Asked about complaints that Newmarket police were going too hard on the motoring public, as evidenced by the number of charges in the local police court, Reeve Dr. L. W. Dales said that this was not so. Dr. Dales said that Newmarket was blamed for charges laid by the district police, and that the local police were using moderation in laying charges for traffic offences.

GRAND TIME ENJOYED

"The best convention yet," declared returning delegates from the Ontario-Quebec convention of Lions clubs at Bigwin this week.

International President Frank V. Birch addressed the convention. District Governor Leland W. "Pete" Peterson of Windsor presided.

Next year the Lions will go on a "dream-boat" convention from Sarnia. Instead of one district governor, three were elected: Dr. J. Brown, Bowmanville; Dr. Dean, Oakville; "Shorty" Green, Sudbury.

Frank Courtney of Newmarket was elected to the board of governors for a term of two years.

About 219 delegates were present and about 550 Lions and their wives registered.

Those attending from Newmarket included Mr. and Mrs. W. L. Bosworth, Mr. and Mrs. Alex. Eves, Mr. and Mrs. F. A. Lundy, Mr. and Mrs. H. E. Gilroy, Mr. and Mrs. Wilford Duffy, Mr. and Mrs. W. R. Ewing, Mr. and Mrs. Alex. Georgas, Mr. and Mrs. Frank Courtney, Mr. and Mrs. H. E. Lambert, Miss Gwen Lambert, Mr. and Mrs. W. M. Cockburn, Mr. and Mrs. W. J. Geer, Mr. and Mrs. Wm. White, Dr. and Mrs. C. E. VanderVoort, Mr. and Mrs. R. L. Pritchard and Mr. and Mrs. J. S. Law paid shorter visits to the convention.

One of the highlights of the convention was Tuesday evening when a Newmarket girl, Miss Gwen Lambert, sang.

BERYL M. BOGART WEDS J. E. MORRIS

A quiet wedding was solemnized Tuesday afternoon at the residence of the bride's parents, Prospect St., Newmarket, when Beryl M. Bogart, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. L. C. Bogart, became the bride of Mr. John E. Morris, son of Mr. Morris and the late John Morris of Stratford.

The ceremony was performed by the Rev. R. R. McMath of Trinity United church, Newmarket, against a background of pink and white roses, peonies and delphiniums.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride, who was unattended, wore a gown of white net over tulle with shoulder length veil falling from a bandeau of pearls and carrying a shower bouquet of pink roses and lilies of the valley. The wedding march was played by Mrs. Fred Connell, Toronto, cousin of the bride, and during the signing of the register Mrs. Geo. Arbogast of Stratford, sister of the groom, sang.

A reception followed, the bride's mother receiving in a gown of orchid sheer and a cascade of panicles while the mother of the groom was attired in a gown of mauve sheer with corsage of lilies of the valley.

Later the couple left on a trip to New York city, the bride travelling in an ensemble of navy blue, trimmed with white and navy accessories. Upon their return Mr. and Mrs. Morris will reside at 93 Prospect Ave., Newmarket.

CHRISTIAN CHURCH
DISCUSSES UNION

Representing the ten Christian churches in Ontario, Rev. Dr. W. S. Alexander returned last week from the biennial general council of the Congregational-Christian church at Beloit College, Beloit, Wisconsin.

A delegate of the Disciples of Christ addressed the council, Dr. Alexander said. There is hope of union between the two denominations. There are 1,100,000 in the Congregational-Christian church and 1,500,000 in the Disciples of Christ.

In the United States, Dr. Alexander said, southern and northern Methodists have united, while Presbyterians and Baptists, split at the time of the civil war, are still divided.

PREVENT THREE DISEASES WITH TOXOID - M.O.H.

Smallpox Vaccination Being Neglected, Dr. Wesley States

Alarm over the failure of parents to have their children vaccinated against smallpox is expressed by Dr. J. H. Wesley, M. O. H., in a letter which was given to school children for their parents today. The letter follows:

We love the children. We feed them and clothe them. We also care for and protect them in their weakness and innocence from every possible danger. It is only when you have the little ones up in the morning, washed, dressed and away to school, that you can settle down to your regular household duties. A few mornings ago, your M.O.H. was very much impressed in one of the busy homes in town where a fond mother was polishing one of Mary Lou's shoes getting her little girlie ready for school while Mary Lou was bringing out sounds of melody on the piano in her morning practice.

It is a wonderful blessing to be well and strong and healthy. There are so many different kinds of disease the children are exposed to, that we are all trying to keep them from getting sick. When they get sick, it adds to the work and anxiety of the mother of the family, so that we are doing everything in our power to protect them from sickness. There are a number of diseases peculiar to children, diseases that only children have, such as measles, whooping-cough, chicken pox, scarlet fever and diphtheria.

These diseases are all catching from one to another. There always has to be a first case of any of these infectious diseases, and if the first case of measles in town could be properly quarantined, there would not be a second one and the epidemic of measles would be killed at the start. So you see how important it is to notify the health officer at once as soon as there is a case of any infectious disease. If everybody were sufficiently careful about these diseases, it would not be very long until our country would be free from them. This means that we are having these diseases simply because of our own carelessness or ignorance.

Diphtheria is a very dangerous disease and in the past 50 years it has wiped out large families. It was then some scientist discovered a cure for the disease, which reduced the death rate very much. Then it was found that children that were treated with diphtheria toxoid would not take diphtheria. Now general toxoiding of all children is the order of the day, and at the present time it is safe to say that if you have been toxoided against diphtheria you will never have it.

Scarlet fever is another disease that is largely preventable by toxoiding. This has not been advocated or practised in town to the same extent as diphtheria toxoiding has, because it requires five treatments instead of three, because the after-effects are not so trivial as those following diphtheria toxoiding. Then again scarlet fever is not followed with the same high death rate as diphtheria, and for yet another reason.

POLICE OFFICES APPEAR SMART

The south section of the ground floor of the town hall has been converted into an attractive police office.

Dr. L. W. Dales, chairman of the police committee, showed the premises to a representative of The Era on Monday. You enter on the south side of the building, going into a waiting-room. There is a counter at the left and a door behind it leading into an office. There is another door at the right leading into the cells. There are three cells, finished in concrete, with standard steel fronts, and a toilet in each. From the cells there is a door leading into the stairway to the courtroom.

The new office and cells will cost $1,500, as estimated, and will be formally opened next Tuesday, when county and court officials will be entertained at dinner.

Cunningham Homers Twice In Game With Schomberg

Alex Webster Holds Schomberg Down To Three Runs

By LORNE MCCORDICK

Garnering an assortment of homers and triples that completely paralyzed the visitors, Newmarket Redmen came out of their recent slump, to take an easy 21-3 decision from Schomberg last Thursday night.

Charlie Cunningham, the pride of The Era staff, pulled a believe-it-or-not, with two homers in one inning. Other Redmen wielding a mighty willow were Harry Brammer and Bob Peters with circuit clouts aplenty.

Displaying masterly control, Alex. Webster made Schomberg's half of the first short and sweet, as the first three men up retired in short order. Tunney and Giles scored for Newmarket.

In the second a double play, Tunney to Brammer to Peters, squelched Schomberg's hopes, roused when Sutton scored.

Newmarket's big inning came in the fourth when Cunningham homered, bringing in Smith and Tunney. Peters and Burkholder walked and a wild throw to third on Brammer's hit brought in Peters.

Burkholder came in on Pewee Hilton's fly advancing Brammer to third. Brammer and Hilton scored while Cunningham's second homer of the inning brought in Giles and Tunney as well as himself.

Wather, the Schomberg pitcher, was yanked and Ellison hurriedly sent in. Peters promptly hit a triple. The inning ended with a total of ten runs chalked up on the score board.

Brammer brought in two other runners with his four-bagger in the fifth. Harry pulled heads-up ball all night, pulling several spectacular catches.

Cliff Giles and Mickey Smith were unable to cash in on a ball player's dream, as with the bases loaded twice in the sixth, Smith walked and Giles hit a single forcing Big Alex out at home.

Schomberg: Graham, ss; Skinner, rf; Kay, cf; Thompson, 1b; B. Sutton, lf; Forn, 2b; Cutler, 3b; battery, Sutton, Wather and Ellison.

Newmarket: Giles, cf; Hilton, ss; Smith, rf; Tunney, 3b; Cunningham, lf; Peters, 1b; Brammer, 2b; battery, Burkholder and Webster.

It was the first day of a new term, and the teacher asked a small girl in her class—a new pupil—what her father's name was. "Daddy," replied the child. "Yes, I know," said the teacher. "But what does your mother call him?" "She doesn't call him anything," was the quick answer. "She likes him."

Public Awaits Definite Information For Building

Mayor Thinks Sales Tax
Removal Is Constructive

Quite a number of Newmarket people are thinking of building if there is any financial help in the new federal housing legislation. The Era learned this week from local builders.

Dubious about the wisdom of the housing legislation, Mayor Dr. S. J. Boyd told The Era, however, that he believed the removal of sales tax from building materials was a constructive move.

Hardware manufacturers are shipping goods to the trade without invoices, as the result of confusion arising out of the budget removal of sales tax from building materials. The Era learned from John Macnab, local hardware man.

Mr. Macnab cited Hardware and Metal, trade magazine, which says that dealers are selling goods on a "guess" basis. This magazine says that removal of the tax on the finished goods and application to raw materials will not lower costs much.

Some of the contradictions cited by this magazine are: Lock sets exempt, but knobs and handles bought separately subject to sales tax. Sash pulleys exempt, but not sash cord and weights.

The sales tax is removed on a small sash pulley which costs only a few cents, but the farmer will still have to pay sales tax on the heavy track and hangers for his barn doors.

Furnaces are exempt but stoves are not. Manufacturers of both articles have to pay sales tax on pig iron for furnaces but not on pig iron for stoves.

World Traveller Visits
Newmarket In Car

She travels alone but is not lonely.

Mrs. I. W. Moshier, a cousin of F. H. Hewson, manager of the Imperial Bank, has lived by herself in a trailer since February.

She couldn't be lonely, for her mind is richly stored with experiences gained in many lands. Mrs. Moshier is a guest of Mr. and Mrs. Hewson. She arrived on Friday from Florida where she spent part of the winter.

A representative of The Era enjoyed an hour's chat with Mrs. Moshier at her trailer home on Monday afternoon. Mrs. Moshier opened a screen door to admit the visitor. The interior of the trailer was smartly finished. There were the "makings" of two double beds, with a collapsible partition which made the trailer into two rooms at will. There was a refrigerator, a sink, the water pumped by hand from a tank at the back where the gas tank of an automobile would be, an oil stove, many neatly fitted in little shelves for dishes, clothes or other articles. There were a clothes closet and a wash-room.

When Mrs. Moshier decides to stop for the night, she jacks up the trailer, which has only two wheels, and if she is going to use the oil-stove she actually uses a level to make sure that the floor is even.

Mrs. Moshier was born in Brantford. Her husband, who was a professor at the University Page 6, Col. 6

CHEAPER HOUSING

Newmarket needs a board of trade or a business men's association. There are plenty of undertakings which a board of trade could undertake to interest people in Newmarket, to bring more business to Newmarket or to make Newmarket a nicer place to live or to help the town council plan Newmarket's future. For instance the Orillia board of trade has been studying new federal legislation to promote building. We give you a report from the Orillia Packet and Times, which is of more than passing interest.

The board of trade is planning to take advantage of the dominion government's new housing scheme to promote a building campaign in Orillia. The new bill was thoroughly discussed this week, and as a result, at a special meeting held on Monday morning, the following telegram was sent to the Hon. Charles A. Dunning, minister of finance:

"Council Orillia board of trade much gratified with your plan for stimulating building. Would respectfully suggest, however, that proposal that municipalities should sell lots at $30 is unjust to owners of vacant property who have paid heavy taxes throughout depression. Moreover, these lots represent tax arrears and failure to realize value would add to tax burden.

"Would also urge that provision for tax payment by individuals should be extended to individuals building homes for rental. Part II, not operating here, but homes for rental needed and individuals, particularly those owning vacant lots, ready to build if given encouragement and relief from extreme taxation."

This telegram refers to the proposal that the dominion government should pay 100 per cent of the taxes for the first year, 50 per cent for the second year and 25 per cent for the third year on houses erected by an owner for occupation by himself. The board felt that this, or some similar concession, should be made to persons who would be willing to erect houses for rental, for which there has been a demand in Orillia this spring far beyond the supply. Part II of the act provides assistance, and a fixed tax rate of ten mills for low rental housing erected by a municipality or by other "local authority" on a non-profit or limited-dividend basis. But it is not thought probable that Orillia would be in a position to take advantage of the provisions of this part, which the minister of finance himself explained, is intended to apply to the larger centres.

Mr. Geo. A. McLean, M.P., is co-operating in bringing these amendments to the attention of the minister.

The board of trade is also taking steps to try to interest a lending corporation to make loans in Orillia. In the past, the cost of inspection has been a stumbling block. But under the new act the government undertakes to pay $20 towards the cost of the first inspection, and mileage for subsequent inspections, in places where there is not sufficient business to justify the opening of an office. Under the new act, authority is given for loans up to 90 per cent of the lending value, for approved loans.

NEW DEAL IN SCHOOL

Northern York county can look back upon the school year now completed with considerable satisfaction. There has been a new deal for the child in most of our public schools. Under the leadership of Inspector R. H. Roberts, our schools have made a great deal out of the suggestions of the new course of studies. Many of the teachers have been free to do this last year things they have wanted to do for a long time. We are told that some of the senior teachers, who might be expected to be least warm towards radical curriculum changes, have been most successful in carrying out the new ideas. "No two children are exactly alike," said Chief Inspector V. K. Groer in a recent address on the new studies. He said that the new course would have the children "learn to do by doing and to do by knowing," and emphasizes "self-expression wisely directed, and warns against arbitrary repression."

FOUR SHORT YEARS

Last week The Era had the pleasure and honor of publishing a picture of Miss Nora Penrose, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Albert Penrose. That makes the writer aware that it is nearly four years since he came to Newmarket. One of the very first, if not the first, articles he wrote for The Era was an account of Miss Penrose's brilliant high school career, which she was then leaving behind her for university. They have been four crowded happy years for us. We imagine Miss Penrose would say the same of her years at university.

TROUBLED WITH MOSQUITOES?

Newmarket's board of health is giving good advice in advising citizens to pour oil on the troubled waters where mosquitoes breed. Old crank-case oil will do.

A GRAND GRANDSTAND

Citizens are going to have quite a pleasant surprise when they see the nice little grandstand which has been erected at the fair grounds. A combined agricultural fair and horse show should go over very nicely. Such an event, however, as pointed out by Mr. W. M. Cockburn, the agricultural representative, recently, should not be planned primarily as a scheme to bring business to town. It should be put over by an agricultural society, working intelligently to improve the standard of farm stock and production.

RADICALISM BECOMES CONSERVATISM

Sometimes there is the difference of only a few years between radical ideas and conservative ideas. The suggestions made a few years ago by Agnes Macphail, M.P., former Sharon school teacher, that Canada's penal institutions were antiquated in their methods were regarded seriously only by her radical associates of the "ginger group." She kept at it, however, and now a commission report bears out fully all the radical ideas of Miss Macphail. The idea of state medicine is another pet of the same corner of the federal house. It is still a radical idea, but it is rapidly becoming respectable. In Midland two weeks ago Rt. Rev. R. J. Renison, rector of St. Paul's Anglican church, Toronto, (formerly Canon Cody's church), telling of his experiences in the north-west, said that in outlying areas state medicine was becoming a necessity. He added: "That might be a good thing everywhere. If the education of our children is so important that we arrange that everyone, no matter how poor, shall learn to read and write, I do not know but that the health of the human body is much more important. In every city and every town there should be opportunity for the latest treatment in medical care and nursing."

Credit Unions Too

The same point is illustrated by the debate in parliament on Friday on small loan companies. A Liberal member from Saskatchewan said that the government should "set up credit unions or else make a grant of $10,000 to the Canadian Association for Adult Education to promote the cause of co-operative credit unions." And of course the C.C.F. members of the house said: "Hear, hear." The Toronto Star's report of the debate added: "Rt. Hon. Ernest Lapointe, minister of justice, also thumped approval."

Amazing Success

It seems to us that credit unions are rank socialism, and yet there is evidently within the ranks of the old parties substantial support for them. Did you know that millions of dollars have been loaned in Canada by credit unions, and repaid to them? The credit unions of the farmers and fishermen of eastern Nova Scotia have been widely publicized, but they are not as large, or doing anything like the business of the credit unions of Quebec or several credit unions in the city of Ottawa. These credit unions have had amazing success in making loans and getting them repaid.

Credit Union Field

The credit union is really more in competition with the small loan company than with the chartered bank. Credit unions have had great success in making small personal loans, which we believe the chartered banks have avoided as much as possible until recently. We believe that today the chartered banks will lend money for a reasonable purpose to any person of good character with a wage, salary or other income. In the past they have required more in the way of security, and they must be cautious in order to avoid losses and remain solvent. But credit unions have been able to go farther with less risk. How is this possible?

How It Works

Consider the nature of a credit union. A dozen farmers get together and decide to form a credit union. They secure a charter under existing Ontario legislation on credit unions, and then sell shares, say, for $10 each. Most of them agree to deposit a dollar a week in the union and to persuade their friends to deposit money. The bank is open only one day a week, every Saturday in the nearest market town. They have elected a board and members of the board have agreed to take turns in serving free of charge in accepting deposits. There may be a little rent to pay but that is the only expense. Then one of the members gets hard up and applies for a loan. He has already tied up all his available cash in cattle which he is keeping over winter. Perhaps he even borrowed money for this purpose from a chartered bank. Now he needs money for an operation for a member of the family, or to permit his wife to go some distance to visit her mother who is very ill. Or perhaps he just wants to buy a cream separator or a washing-machine and wants to avoid the high cost of instalment buying. This sort of loan may not appeal to a chartered bank, and yet the board of directors of the credit union, all knowing the farmer personally, may decide that there is no risk involved and make the loan. More than that, the farmer may feel a little more conscientious about returning the money because he has borrowed it from fellow farmers and from himself. He was probably subjected to a good deal of "education" before the credit union was started, and his interest in the credit union and his understanding of the principles on which it is operating may make him more anxious to repay promptly. Anyway, Canadian credit unions have an amazing record.

Amazing Strength

One of four credit unions in the city of Ottawa has loaned $850,000 to its members in 25 years with losses totalling $243. In 1925 there were over 200 credit unions in the province of Quebec with assets of over $16,000,000. We believe that there has been a steady growth since that time. The Nova Scotia credit unions, started only six years ago, have a share capital in excess of $400,000.

SHOULD STUDY ORILLIA LIGHTING

A few weeks ago The Era advised that Newmarket authorities inspect Orillia's new bracket street lighting before deciding to use standards. If the bracket lights were even equally good as the standards, they would be more acceptable in Newmarket because of the street and sidewalk space they would save. However, they are not just as good, but both better and cheaper, according to the Orillia Packet and Times.

Particulars about the new Orillia lights are given in the following article from the Packet and Times:

One of the fears expressed by some merchants when the new intense street light was proposed was that the increased light would interfere with the window lighting, and necessitate added installation. Experience has shown the exact opposite to be the effect. The bright light in the street adds to the appearance of the windows. This is well illustrated by the windows at Steacy's. Always well lighted, they have become still more brilliant since the high candle power fixture was installed outside them.

On the trip to the mining country there were questions asked by editors in several towns where street lighting is contemplated, as to the Orillia system, and, in particular, as to the cost compared with standards. The answer is that the bracket system, even with the more elaborate lantern fixtures, costs only about half as much to install as standards. For instance, the annual charge for standards such as the sample erected at the corner of West and Mississauga streets, was quoted at $4,800, as against $3,200 for the bracket-lantern type. And this for 1000 watt lamps, whereas there is 1500 watts (two 750s) in the standard, which nevertheless throws less light on the roadway than the 1000 watts, because nearly half of its effect is wasted on the sky. The bracket-lantern system is, therefore, both cheaper and more effective. Moreover, where the annual sum to be paid for maintenance is limited, the saving on installation costs can be invested in current. And after all, it is light that is wanted.

The Midland Free Press, which recently purchased the Midland Argus, and is now giving Midland a finer newspaper than ever, says: "Still another weekly newspaper amalgamation has taken place. The Parry Sound North Star has purchased the plant and business of the Parry Sound Canadian, which has been in business for 40 years. One newspaper is all that is required to serve any community under 20,000 people these days, and in a number of Canadian cities over that size one newspaper is filling the bill satisfactorily. Windsor, London, Hamilton, St. Catharines, Kingston, and Brantford have but one newspaper."

There were 65 candidates writing entrance examinations at Newmarket high school last week, half of whom were from Newmarket public schools.

There was a large attendance in the school room of the Methodist church on Tuesday evening, when the friends of Rev. and Mrs. R. J. D. Simpson, who are moving after a successful pastorate of four years, met to spend a farewell social evening.

The Common Round

By Isabel Inglis Colville

STRAWBERRY TIME AT INGLESIDE

"How do you people make strawberry shortcake?" demanded the head of the house, as he returned from a round of distributing strawberries.

"Ask mother," said I, "she usually makes them."

"Well," said mother, judiciously, as she proceeded to manufacture the asked for dainty, "if I made it to suit myself, I'd make a light cake—"

"Oh never, no never!" we chanted in unison—"Well—hardly ever," she rejoined in Gilbertian vein.

"but," she continued severely, "you two are two to one, and besides you eat three times as much, so, I make the biscuit variety."

"Yes, yes," we agreed, with one eye on the cream and scarlet confection taking shape before our eyes.

"The thing is," went on my better half as he gazed upon the finished product, "one of my customers has always made the cake variety, and when I mentioned the kind we make she immediately asked for the recipe."

Seeing our barely concealed amusement, he went on defensively—"What am I, that I should know these mysteries?"

"Well, here's the recipe," said mother, and listening, I thought maybe somebody else might like it, so here it is.

Ingredients

2 cups pastry flour

2 rounded tablespoons shortening

1/2 cup sugar

3 teaspoons baking powder

1/2 teaspoon salt (acetic)

Milk, strawberries.

Method

Sift the flour, salt and baking powder; add the sugar, then cut in the shortening, and mix with enough milk to make a soft dough.

Pat to the size of a cake tin or cut into individual cakes. Bake quickly, split and butter while hot.

Have ready a box and a half of strawberries, mashed with sugar to taste, and a tiny bit of water. Put generously between the layers and more generously still on top and you have a "dish to set before a king."

There is something of artistry about strawberry picking. We try to do it all in the early evening.

For one thing I can't stand the heat while the sun is directly overhead, and we find besides, that berries picked in the evening, retain their color and fragrance and also firmness, better. And then there are so many lovely things happening at that time in the evening.

For one thing we have a concert—no, not radio, nor do we lift our own voices in song. We hear "bird songs at eventide" and what singing!

The song sparrows, high on the apple-trees sing their little roundelay; the killdeer call all about us; the robins converse about family affairs, frequently breaking into song, and also, I've no doubt, talking about the fine feed they had off the patch before we interfered with them.

We hear the dogs bringing the cows home, and the very loud purring of Cappy, who seems to think strawberry picking is staged solely for his enjoyment, as he wanders about from place to place always within sight, or lies close beside one of us and sings himself to sleep.

And there is the beauty of the berries themselves; sometimes sitting up in perky clusters above their green settling; sometimes hiding coily, until lured gently from their leafy bed.

There is, in our lives, the beauty of fine pictures, fine books, beautiful and inspiring music, and there is also the beauty of the simple things of which strawberry picking is one and not the least!

READING THE SIGNS

There will be no federal election this fall, we are told, as there were few tax reductions in the budget. If we must wait for an election year for tax reductions, let us hope for an election soon. Eliminating the sales tax would give a nice impetus to business. We have to remember, however, that the federal government is piling up a deficit year after year, and that we may have the sales tax with us for a long time.

A HOLIDAY A MONTH

June 9, observed as the king's birthday, although as a matter of fact a lot of other people have a better claim to that particular day, was declared a public holiday in Barrie. June 3 always passed as a legal and bank holiday but not as a general holiday, and the Barrie Examiner thinks that it was a mistake to depart from the old practice. Why bankers need more holidays than merchants and printers we could never figure out. We are just as anxious for a holiday as the next fellow. Newmarket held to the old practice, however, with only schools and banks taking the holiday. Even postal employees, who were entitled to some sort of a holiday, kindly distributed The Era as usual. We favor holidays, but not Thursday holidays. A holiday on the first Monday in every month is our suggestion.

"But," complained the conductor, "he forgot to leave the coffee."

THE CHUMS BEMOAN SOME BIRDLAND EVILS

BY RUTH DINGMAN HERR

"I certainly wish that Mr. Jones would weed his garden more frequently," said Mrs. Rob Robin to her neighbor, Jenny, the House Wren.

"Why, what difference does it make to you?" asked Jenny.

"A great deal," Mrs. Rob replied. "When he weeds, I just go out with him and pick up the worms after him. It is very convenient. And I need so many worms these days to feed my second family of youngsters. They're such lazy children."

"It certainly does look ridiculous to see you stuffing worms into the mouth of a child that looks almost as big as yourself," said Jenny. "If they were mine I'd simply tell them to feed themselves or else go without. You pamper them too much."

"I suppose I do," agreed the Rob Robin lady. "But you're so strong-minded, you know, Jenny. Look at that pretty Goldfinch over there on the wire! Mrs. Goldfinch was telling me about her lovely nest of eggs, this morning. Imagine looking after eggs at this time of year."

"Of course, our friends, the Cedar Waxwings, are just as slow about it," said Jenny. "Some birds have crazy notions."

"Look out, folks," called Rob Robin just then, across the garden. "There's a cat prowling down by the back fence."

"Come on with me then, children," Mrs. Rob Robin called quickly. "I'll see you again, Jenny."

Jenny Wren scolded heartily to herself at the news about the cat, and went cautiously nearer to observe his whereabouts. A moment later she had hunted up the Robins and was giving them her news.

"You needn't worry about Sneaky, the Cat, for a little while," she said. "He had already caught a bird."

"How ghastly!" shuddered Mrs. Rob Robin. "Anyone we know?"

"A young Song Sparrow, I think," said the Wren. "I didn't like to get too close. If only there was something we could do about the dreadful cat. The situation is really frightful. We don't know who will be the next victim."

"That is not the only evil in birdland," stated Rob Robin. "I have just been hearing about one of the worst scandals that ever occurred among the birds."

"What is that?" asked the others.

"Mr. and Mrs. Meadowlark were telling me about a young Cowbird that they have brought up. He has just finally left them, to go and live with his own people, without so much as a word of thanks, of course, for all they have done for him."

"Why do they do it?" asked Mrs. Rob.

"They can't very well help themselves," replied Rob. "Once a Cowbird's egg is laid in their nest, they either have to hatch it out or else desert the nest, unless they build another layer over the top of the eggs, and then, of course, they have to sacrifice their own eggs, too. The Yellow Warbler sometimes does that, or else deserts the nest, but personally I would rather hatch out the egg than give up my own eggs."

"Yes, hatch it out and then have it hatch out earlier than the others and grab all the best food, and grow up bigger and stronger, and shove the other birds out of the nest, to die on the ground," said Mrs. Rob.

"The Meadowlarks lost two of their children on account of the Cowbird, and yet, once they have taken him into the family, they treat him just like one of their own," Mr. Rob said. "I simply can't understand it."

"It's very depressing that that sort of evil has to be put up with," said Jenny. "We must educate the birds, so that they will be able to fight these things. When you think of how many other birds are sacrificed for every single Cowbird that grows up, you certainly become discouraged. It's distressing, all right."

A NONCONFORMIST ORDER OF SERVICE

By Rev. R. R. McMath

Articles 3 and 4

It is simple but correct psychology to have consecration follow instruction. That is the third step in an order of service. The form or fashion of the act of consecration is most important. In the old days, attendants were invited to come forward and kneel at the altar.

Later it was suggested they should stand up or raise a hand. More recently cards were provided for them to sign. All these were definite. And why not? If a business man feels he has done his job when he makes a sale, or the insurance man feels he has done his well when he delivers the policy, why should the preacher of the gospel be satisfied with anything less than a number definitely accepting the gospel he has preached?

A new method of definite consecration may be found in the offering. It should symbolize the offering of ourselves, and therefore should naturally follow the sermon. In the presentation of it there should be a Choral Dedication. Let the choir and the congregation join in singing "We Give Thee But Thine own, etc." Again, that eliminates the priest and involves all taking part. Indeed, the priest should consecrate himself anew with his people. It should be a united and entire act of consecration.

Now, having approached the throne of Grace, having listened to the appeal of the Gospel of Christ and having readily responded, we naturally reach the fourth and concluding thought which is the Dismissal.

Careful thought must be given to the Dismissal. I have been in churches where some folk would almost knock you down in their rush for the door. In others the choir would greet one another with hearty laughing and the whole scene would remind one of the ending of a rugby game. May I remind you that everything must be done "decently and in order

POLICE COURT CITY BOYS KNOCK DOWN CITIZEN

Tom Hibbert, Georgina township, charged with having a slot machine in his shop, was fined $25 and costs of $11.50, or 30 days and the machine ordered to be confiscated at police court on Tuesday.

Constable W. J. Myers testified he received a package of cigarettes in exchange for two slugs.

Charged with committing common assault against Ed. McGrady, Newmarket, Russell R. Brown, David Robbins, and James McMahon were each fined $5 and costs, or ten days while Ralph Montgomery was fined $10 and costs or 15 days. All four young men were from Toronto. It was the night of the street dance.

"They were using profane language and I told them not to," said Mr. McGrady.

The assault took place on June 15 near the sign-board at Queen and Main Sts. The four knocked over McGrady, who injured his head, then they ran, pursued by Constables, Mount, Watt and Fleury, who later captured the four men, according to the constables' story.

Charges of having liquor in an unlawful place laid against Harold Williams, Kenneth Gould, Kenneth Wright, Russell Barrera, Toronto, and James Hardy, Toronto, were all changed to consuming and each was fined $10 and costs, or 15 days and the liquor seized on each charge was ordered to be confiscated. These were four different cases, four cars being involved.

A charge of bigamy laid against Frederick Yorkie, Toronto, was adjourned one week and bail was set at $1,500.

The evidence in the four charges laid against a 16-year-old Newmarket boy was heard and the accused was remanded in custody one week for sentence. Charges of taking an auto against two Toronto boys were disposed of in juvenile court.

The four charges were failing to remain at the scene of an accident, reckless driving, driving without an operator's permit, and taking an auto.

Constable Martindale said the Newmarket boy told him that he had thrown away the keys of the car. The car had been taken from the Edgewater dance hall without the owner's permission and the boy didn't even know who the owner was, the constable stated. The boy had only a 60-day permit.

Speaking for the boy, who is only 16, K. M. R. Stiver stated that the boy's parents could do little with him and that he had been given every chance, and he advised the boy be not sent to jail but sent to a corrective or training school.

A charge of driving while intoxicated laid against Roderick Ward was adjourned one week and bail was set at $200.

Joseph Ricco, peddling without a license, $2 and costs.

Better Bacon To England Would Raise Hog Prices

Shows Lights And Heavies Exported As Wiltshire Sides

(Taken from Rural Co-operator)

In evidence before a special committee of the Manitoba legislature inquiring into production, transportation and marketing of livestock, Hon. H. H. Stevens, former minister of trade and commerce, declared that he believed Canada can put on the British market a bacon equal in quality to that supplied by Denmark. In order to do so, he points out, it would be necessary to select more carefully that portion of our good bacon which finds its way to the export market.

Our bacon is exported under two grades, A and B, explained Mr. Stevens, and one of the serious mistakes we make is to allow all five grades of Canadian hogs—selects, bacons, butchers, lights and heavies—to be included in our best A grade export bacon. In support of his argument, Mr. Stevens quoted directly from evidence given before the price spreads committee by E. J. Smith of the White Packing Company. Extracts from that evidence are as follows:

Q. Out of your hogs you make Wiltshire sides from selects, bacons, butchers and lights? Mr. White—Yes.

Q. Then they are sent over to the Old Country in the form of Wiltshire sides?

Mr. White—Yes.

Q. So that you have in the first grade of hogs that range from 50 to 70 pounds, Wiltshire sides, that may be made from either selects, bacons, butchers, lights or heavies?

Mr. White—Yes.

Summing up his point, Mr. Stevens said, "Now you have the fact that the price of hogs is fixed by the price of bacon in England; you have the fact that Canadian bacon prices are fixed by a committee of British buyers once a week; you have further that Canadian bacon brings about eight to 12 or 14 shillings less than Danish; you have the fact that into our A grade go five different grades of hogs, and you have the further fact that we have 28 per cent selects marketed out of which we could easily get 15 per cent of the best for export, and thus raise the standard of the price in England

FORGET SOCIAL REFORM ADVISED

A presentation was made to Rev. Dr. E. J. Thompson of Aurora at Trinity United church, Newmarket, on Sunday morning in recognition of his services as moderator of the Newmarket church during the vacancy in the pulpit.

"I have come to have a great respect for this church and your leaders, and the way you have carried on in the face of difficulties," replied Dr. Thompson. "I hope that the association with Aurora may continue to be close."

W. R. Stephens expressed the congregation's gratitude to Dr. Thompson.

Dr. Thompson and Rev. Arthur Johnson, Coaticook, P.Q., assisted Rev. R. R. McMath in conducting the communion service. Mr. McMath made his voice heard with the help of a loud-speaker.

"It doesn't matter what a man believes if he doesn't do anything about his beliefs," said Rev. Mr. Johnson. "Watt acted on his idea about the power in a tea-kettle, and the steam-engine revolutionized the world."

"The ideas of Karl Marx wouldn't have mattered if they had stayed within a book, but when men and women get hold of ideas like those, and start to work them out, then society has a problem on its hands."

"When a man acts according to the things he honestly believes, then miracles begin to happen."

"What contribution has the twentieth century made to the world? We have shown what the greatest war in history looks like, we have had a great depression, we have seen more people starve than at any time in history, we have seen the age of jazz."

"A young man has a right to be comfortable in this world. Why should the world hold a young man at bay? A man hasn't the power under the economic tyranny of today to hold to eight to 14 shillings a hundred, which, even taking J. S. McLean's own philosophy, would raise the price of hogs in Canada that proportion, or roughly ten per cent. It could be done tomorrow and in my opinion ought to be done."

D. Judd, C. Webster Given Many Awards For Blooms

Eleven Candidates For "Best Garden" Title Are Announced

The peony show, sponsored by the Aurora Horticultural Society in the town hall on Saturday, brought out a fine showing of blooms. Those shown by David Judd came in for special praise and he drew the lion's share of the "firsts" in the peony classes.

W. C. Walte took a first prize for the best three white peonies, with David Judd in second place. In the pink, red and fancy varieties, David Judd took four firsts, with Mrs. M. L. Andrews, Chas. Webster and C. Dodson taking second places.

Mrs. T. A. Hamer had the best of the single blooms. Awards for the best collection of peonies went to D. Judd, C. Dodson and Mrs. M. L. Andrews, in the order named, and the judge selected one of Mr. Judd's blooms as the best specimen in the show.

Other results were: pansies—A. J. Feren; white roses, Mrs. T. A. Hamer, Chas. Webster; pink roses,

Richmond Hill Softballers Hammer Shore For 10 Runs

Aurorans Held Nearly Hitless In Thursday Ball Game

Seeking revenge for a 6-3 defeat handed them by Aurora earlier in the week, Richmond Hill, playing in their own lot, hammered the pitching of "Nugget" Shore to earn a 10-0 win on Thursday.

Bennett's hurling for Richmond Hill left the Aurorans hitless, except in one inning, while Bennett shone, too, in the batting, swatting out a handy homer with bases loaded.

Proctor, hefty catcher for the Hill, poked out one of the longest hits seen this season, but the bases were clear. Moberly pulled a wonderful catch to rob Shatka of a score and all in all, it was Richmond Hill's night.

"Ninny" Heaney, playing shortstop for Aurora, handed in a smart game, but neither this nor the fine play of Wally Jennings, newcomer to the Aurorans' second-base position, were enough to stem the rising tide of Hill scoring.

It was a tough break for the Aurora team, but every team in the group has shown itself capable of turning in some brilliant pitching this season, and even on an off night, has been able to do his share of the hitting, too. He seemed helpless on Thursday, however, and is probably glad to get the game out of his system.

SCHOMBERG ANGLICAN CHURCH MARKS 95TH YEAR

Mrs. Boys of Toronto was a Sunday visitor at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Elgin Hastings.

Miss Marion Fachie and Miss Eugene Hart of Beeton spent Sunday at the latter's home here with Mr. and Mrs. J. Hart.

Miss Lorna Dillane spent the weekend at her home here.

Dr. and Mrs. M. K. Dillane entertained the members of the horticultural society on Thursday evening last week. Dr. Dillane gave a short talk on rose culture after which the party went indoors for refreshments and a social hour.

The Anglican W.A. met in the church basement Thursday afternoon for a quilting.

St. Mary Magdalene's Anglican church observed its 95th anniversary on Sunday with special services at 11 a.m. and 7.30 p.m.

The original church stood in Lloydtown and was founded by Canon H. B. Osler in 1843. The present building was erected in 1925.

The special preacher at both services was Rev. J. H. Colclough of West Hill, a former rector of this parish. The present rector, Rev. E. V. Abbott, gave a short resume of the church history at the evening service.

Special music included solos in the morning by Mrs. A. H. MacLeod, who sang "Still the Same" and in the evening by Mrs. G. Lister who sang "The Stranger of Galilee," most sweetly. Good congregations attended both services.

The Schomberg softball team resumed their losing streak after one lone victory, when they lost to the Newmarket Redmen on Friday night.

Mr. and Mrs. Raymond Woods of Rich Hill spent Sunday with Mr. and Mrs. Geo. Taylor.

Several from Schomberg attended the strawberry festival at Rich Hill United church on Friday night last week.

BAPTISTS PLAN SPECIAL SUNDAY

Arrangements have been made to have Rev. Roy Essex of Toronto, former minister of the Baptist church in Aurora, return to Aurora for the morning service on Sunday, July 10. The church is planning a reunion service in connection with old home week, and another former minister, Rev. L. H. Vall, of Vernon, Ont., will preach in the evening.

The morning service will be followed by a communion service to which elderly and shut-in members will be brought. Following the evening service the members will join in the mass service to be held in the town park. Every effort is being made to reach former members and friends of the church, that these might share in the fellowship of the meetings.

The men's class held an open session last Sunday to which the ladies were invited. The teacher, Kenneth MacLackie, gave a very helpful study on "Sharing service with Christ." The class will discontinue its meetings during July and August.

Next Sunday the pastor will speak on "Examination Day," in the morning, and on the subject, "The Unknown God," in the evening.

REBEKAHS MAKE PRESENTATIONS

Two presentations featured the meeting of the Elma Rebekah lodge on Monday evening. Sister Vera Ashton, retiring District Deputy President, received a silver comfort. A silver flower basket was presented to Sister Alma Andrews, past D.D.P. of Metropolitan District.

Sister Olive Rowe gave a report of the Rebekah Assembly recently held in Hamilton. A social hour concluded the meeting.

INJURES LEG

William West had to be removed to York County hospital following injuries to his leg, sustained in a ball game at Temperanceville last week.

NEW FOR AURORA

During the past year milk dealers have become conscious of the increasing popularity of Homogenized milk. From a very obscure beginning this product has rapidly scaled the heights of popularity and now enjoys a very stable and well-founded market in many of the larger towns and cities.

Homogenized milk made this progress on its own merits. There was no "high pressure" sales campaign to start it on its way. Its popularity is due entirely to its ability to serve a purpose that ordinary cream line milk could not offer.

It is true that Homogenized milk is nothing new. However, its popularity in Aurora is new, and we venture to say that none of us can forecast the wide-reaching effects its acceptance will have on our milk consuming population.

Contrary to the general idea, there is no advance in price for this Homogenized milk.

In common with other milk distributors desirous of giving the best possible service, Cousins Dairies have engaged the services of Mr. John Reeves, who has had several years experience in this particular field. During his stay with us he will be pleased to call upon you and explain in detail more fully the benefits accruing from the continuous use of this principle of milk.

We suggest you take advantage of this opportunity by calling COUSINS DAIRIES. (Adv't.)

YORK JUNIOR FARMERS ENTERTAIN KIWANIS

In appreciation of the splendid support given them by the Downtown Kiwanis Club of Toronto, the York County Junior Farmers entertained over 200 members of the Kiwanis Club and their friends at a picnic at the farm of Col. F. H. Deacon, Unionville, last Wednesday evening.

Following the arrival of the main group of guests from the city to the accompaniment of their Kiwanis Club Boys' Bugle Band, two games of softball were staged between the visitors and the members of the boys' and girls' clubs, represented by the executives of grain, potato, calf, goat and other clubs of York and Ontario counties.

After supper the band played in the Glanburn Farms' string of champion shortbells, which left on Friday on the Western Canada Show Circuit. Adjoining to the spacious barn, the gathering was entertained by the Skitch family with solos and duets, as well as a number put on by the Unionville Girls' Club.

Chairman Bill Champion, president of the York County Juniors, called on a number for short addresses, including H. Newton, past president of the Kiwanis Club, J. W. Lawrence, chairman of their agricultural committee, W. M. Cockburn and E. A. Innes, agri-

"MISS AURORA" SOUGHT BY SERVICE CLUB

Who is Miss Aurora? That is the question being discussed, heatedly discussed since it has been announced that the Aurora Service Club is sponsoring a beauty contest to give the Veterans a helping hand in staging their big day on Saturday, July 9, the first day of the town's old home week.

A beauty contest is always news and this one is no exception. The service club is putting up a silver cup to go with the title of Miss Aurora, and the cup is so attractive that a number of the town's business men have declared their intention of entering the contest themselves.

Girls' Softball Team Shows Lots Of Class In Practices

Ladies Plan To Compete In Tournaments On July 1 And 9

Softball fans have been taking an added interest in the town park in the past week because of a happy inspiration on the part of Bob Westlake. Mr. Westlake has taken on the chore of training a girls' softball team to compete in the tournament being staged by the Veterans on Saturday, July 9.

The girl squad has been practising faithfully and if Mr. Westlake is any judge, they are going places. Among those seen at the recent workouts are Mary Rose, Mrs. Bobby Bell, Anita Matins, Lillian Egan, Kitty Bone, Dorothy Baker, Connie Case, Mae Cameron, Vanetta McGirr, Kay McNaughton, Margaret Southwood and Margaret Trent.

Jean and Vera Beckett, of Newmarket and Elsie Atkinson of Richmond Hill have also put in an appearance. The trainer is hoping to get Margaret McCannan, Lois Manning and Margaret VanZant down from Newmarket, and if transportation can be obtained, it is likely they will be out for the team, too. Elsie Kingdom, of the Wesley church squad, is another player whom it is hoped will make the practices.

Mrs. Bobby Bell looks good for a pitching job, and several others have shown aptitude in this line. Mr. Westlake is going to enter a team in the tournament being held in Maple on July 1, to see how the girls stack up against competition.

Mr. Westlake is looking for a lady to take on the job of manager, The Era learns.

cultural representatives for York and Ontario counties respectively. The program over, everyone enjoyed an old-time barn dance in which many of the city dwellers showed evidence of having been raised on the farm—in fact they boasted of it.

DESCENDANTS OF GORMLEY PIONEER WILL GATHER

Eighteen hundred descendants of Catherine and Peter Brillinger will gather at Markham on July 1 for their first annual family reunion.

Peter Brillinger came to Canada from Holland some time in the 17th century, first settling in eastern Ontario and later coming to Gormley, where he made his 600-acre homestead, a large portion of which still remains in the Brillinger family. He erected a sawmill on the fifth line of Whit-church in 1793.

AGRICULTURALISTS VISIT YORK COUNTYS FARMS

York county is apparently becoming a mecca for sight-seeing groups of rural organizations, according to W. M. Cockburn, agricultural representative, who has during the past 10 days, assisted in conducting these visitors to various farms in the county. The Ottawa Valley Seed Growers, 143 strong, visited in the county on their way to and from the Ontario Agricultural College and a busload of Junior Farmers from Hastings county spent Saturday afternoon in York county.

On Wednesday of last week, W. G. Marriott, agricultural representative for Wentworth, a native of Koswick, headed about 70 Hosiery Breeders and their wives in inspecting five of York county's herds. President S. B. Watson of the York county hosiery club, past-president Joe Darlington, Secretary Frank Ramsay and Geo. C. Jackson, local director of the Canadian Association, also accompanied the group on their visit to the farms of Geo. Jackson, on Geo. S. Henry, Roselawn Farms, Eatop Hall Farm and R. B. MacKinnon's. Dinner was served by the ladies of Elia W. A.

The Bolton Junior Farmers are planning a trip for July 2, when they will visit the northern part of the county.

Several from here attended the garden party in Schomberg sponsored by the Catholic church on Saturday.

The population of Pottageville increased during the weekend with many visitors from different points.

The rain was welcomed by gardeners and farmers around here.

The strawberry crop has not been as heavy as it was last year, owing to insufficient rain.

A retailer, on receiving the first delivery of a large order, was annoyed to find the goods not up to sample. "Cancel my order immediately," he wired to the manufacturers.

They replied, "Regret cannot cancel immediately. You must take your turn."

SECOND TOURNEY GOES TO AURORA

The second of the tennis tournaments for the championship of the York-Simcoe group was played here on Wednesday afternoon of last week and resulted in the Aurora club winning all seven of the matches played.

Keith Davis defeated his Beeton rival, Fred Hall, 6-1, 6-4, and Lees Owmart took Norman Fair of Beeton by 6-1, 6-1. In the men's "A" doubles Davis and Owmart teamed to defeat Hall and Fair, 6-1, 6-1.

The mixed doubles resulted in another Aurora win, Mae Fry and "Wink" Barnard vanquishing Dr. Graham and Nellie Mylanichuk, 6-0, 6-0.

Audrey Grieves represented Aurora in the ladies' singles and chalked up a 6-0, 6-3 win over Joyce Reynolds of Beeton. The ladies' doubles was much the same story all over again, Doris Lacey and Connie Willis trimming the Misses Reynolds of Beeton, 6-0, 6-4.

SCHOOL NOTES

The football practises that have been going on in the park for the last month or two ended up last week on the Maple public school grounds, when, after being nicely cut and bruised the Aurorans were trounced 4-0.

In the hockey tournament that took place round the end of the winter, the Aurorans trounced Maple by something like 5-1, so that Aurora leads in hockey while those lanky farmers from Maple lead in football.

Miss Boynton's pupils got a treat on Monday when they sailed for Musselman's Lake and enjoyed a good three or four hours of swimming. The whole class consumed three or four water-melons and those things are pretty expensive.

The much famed public school grass is getting a little bit trodden down these days. That awful heat last week was the cause and the boys had to seek shade under the trees. Talk of camp arose and lots of boys are planning to go this year.

The kids who do the job of policemen are having a little more to do these days. Tourists and those who live in the city are trying to get north before the army goes through in the latter part of this week.

There is no charge for birth, death or marriage announcements in The Era. Engagement notices cost 50 cents.

Schomberg Trounced By Aurorans, 16-9

Locals Go On Hitting Spree When K. Ellison Has Off-Night

ERRORS ARE PLENTIFUL

In a softball game well sprinkled with both homers and errors, the Aurorans blasted their way to a 16-9 victory over Schomberg here on Tuesday.

Erratic pitching by K. Ellison of Schomberg in the first and third innings gave the Aurorans an opportunity to chalk up an 8-1 lead. T. Sutton led off with a homer for Schomberg in the first inning, but Aurora fielding, which featured a double play by Heaney, kept them without a further score until the fourth.

Aurora hits were scored by Heaney, Jennings and Shatka, who came home on a hit by Yakes, tallying in turn on White's two-bagger, while in a later inning Shropshire, Shatka, White and Hunter tallied.

Three errors in a row by the Aurorans let in two Schomberg runs by Kay and K. Ellison. Then Shropshire batted out a home to make it 9-3 for Aurora.

There was no further scoring until the last of the sixth inning when Yakes and White were batted home by Hunter's second two-base hit, and Hunter made it 12-3 for Aurora as he came in on the batting of Helmkey and Heaney. Schomberg took two runs in the seventh, Foran and Thompson crossing home plate. Aurora waited until the last of the eighth before scoring again, when Heaney and Jennings tallied on Shore's homer. Shropshire came home on a two-sack hit by Yakes to mark up Aurora's 16th run.

A fine come-back attempt by the visitors' netted them four runs to stop it from being too much of a walk-over. Foran got a homer and Thompson and T. Ellison came across on a two-base hit by Skinner. Skinner tallied on a hit by Cutler.

Teams—Schomberg: K. Ellison, p; T. Sutton, c; Thompson, 1b; Foran, 2b; Cutler, 3b; Skinner, ss; Kay, rf; T. Ellison, cf; B. Sutton, lf.

Aurora: Shore, p; Hunter, c; Yakes, 1b; Jennings, 2b; Helmkey, 3b; Heaney, ss; Shropshire, rf; White, cf; Shatka, lf.

Following the program the choir, was entertained at the high school with coffee and sandwiches, prepared by the Aurora Women's Institute. The firemen, who acted as ushers, helped the ladies serve the refreshments, and earned all-star rating by cleaning up the dishes afterward.

Newmarket Sons Of England Bow To "Tanners" Ball Team

Hockey Headliners Prove Useful In Softball Exhibition

Memories of last year's hockey squad were aroused when the "Tanners" softball team met the Newmarket Sons of England squad in an exhibition fixture in the Aurora park on Friday.

"Joint" McComb proved he was as sturdy in the pitcher's box as he was at centre ice last winter, and he hurled the "Tanners" to a 14-7 victory. "Turk" Ferguson also appeared on the lineup, and the Aurora team, appropriately enough, was coached and managed by Andy Closs of the hockey club.

The game proved that there is a lot of fine talent outside the group teams and the rival squads packed a lot of fun into the tangle.

Teams—Sons of England: J. Gormley, p; Keats, c; Cook, 1b; A. Gormley, 2b; C. Evans, 3b; S. Evan, ss; A. Evans, lf; A. Barker, rf; J. Luck, cf.

Tanners: "Joint" McComb, p; Elmer Yakes, c; Bob Beaville, 1b; C. Kennedy, 2b; B. Bone, 3b; R. White, ss; B. McGirr, lf; A. Ferguson, rf; G. Hodgins, cf.

There is another proposed road with which the county is playing ball or something, we do not know just what. It is the idea of building a new road at Wilcox Lake. Here again the county powers are in our opinion acting very foolishly. Reeve Toole and his council in Whitwhore started out to secure a better road for the Wilcox Lake folk by asking the county to take over the mile or so leading from Yonge street to the lake. Instead of doing this the county proposed to build a new road leading away from the lake, which is not called for at all, and which would never remedy the trouble which the council wish to alleviate. Everybody knows that what is wanted at Wilcox Lake is a road from Yonge street around the lake. Just that, and no more, but some argument is presented about the county refusing to build spurs and so miles of useless road must be built to maintain this argument.

"Summed up, the people of Wilcox Lake want a good road to Yonge street and the people of Gormley want a good road through their village to the county road on the fourth. Given these things both places should be satisfied.

AT 83 SHE DEFIES RHEUMATISM

After Suffering Acute Pain for Years

Rheumatism first attacked this old lady in 1931, and gradually spread from her arms to other parts of her body. Then she started to take Kruschen Salts, and now she sends the following letter in her own handwriting:—

"I have suffered from rheumatism since 1931. At first, I felt acute pain in both arms. I could not sleep for pain. It grew worse, and gradually crept down to the tips of my fingers. Next it reached my knees and ankles, which made me quite helpless for a long period. A friend recommended me to take Kruschen Salts. I find they do me more good than any other medicine, liniment or ointment I ever used. This is my own writing, though I am in my 84th year."—(Mrs.) H.

The pains and stiffness of rheumatism are often caused by deposits of needle-pointed uric acid crystals in the muscles and joints. Kruschen Salts stimulate your liver and kidneys to healthy, regular action, and assist them to get rid of the excess uric acid which is frequently the cause of your suffering.

Y. P. U.'S JOIN IN OUTDOOR MEETING

Everyone is certainly thankful for Saturday's rain! Some of the community, the writer included, were travelling west through Guelph, Stratford and the towns between, and for miles the rain teemed down.

Compare the dry comfort of the closed auto to the open or covered buggy of the years past, where rubber sides and knee spread helped to keep off the rain, while Dobbin, heavy with rain-soaked harness, tried to make speed! The auto gained that point. It was surely a million dollar rain and all nature is now rejoicing in the freshness of it.

But the writer must hurry and get to work transplanting a thousand or more late cabbage plants into the field, while the earth is damp and the air cool.

Eversley Young People held their monthly meeting on Wednesday evening at Mrs. Ransom's, King City. Mrs. Ransom was convenor for the June meeting, and arranged for the Young People's Society of York Presbyterian church, Keele St., Toronto, to be Eversley's guests and give the program.

They came, about 40 of them, with their pastor, Rev. Mr. Rowland. It was too hot in the house for young people to sit, while all out-of-door was calling and the night was hot. So the chairs were moved to the commodious verandah and front lawn and there the fine service was held.

There was community singing from the hymn sheets, led by Jim Marsdon, and prayer by the pastor. Then one by one, young men and women stood and gave a short sermonette, or a brief talk.

One young man spoke on "Why I am a Christian." There was a reverence in the service and it was truly a worthwhile meeting. A social hour at the close followed, the guests departed to reach home by midnight.

Mrs. John L. Ferguson of Aurora, Mrs. Harry Ferguson and his mother, Mrs. Rose Ferguson, and Mrs. Lincoln Ferguson, motored to Avonbank, beyond St. Mary's on Saturday for the Ferguson reunion. Allan Gellatly filled his car by taking his mother, Mrs. Gellatly, Jessie Gellatly, T. A. Ferguson and Miss A. A. Ferguson.

Mrs. Gellatly, Alan, Mrs. Clara Smith, Mrs. Rose Ferguson and Miss A. A. Ferguson remained over with friends and returned on Sunday night.

The latter group returned just in time to see the women of the Orange lodge parade on Yonge St., from the service at the United church down to the Orange hall. A gallant band headed the procession, then followed the younger members of the families, who were enjoying the march.

Then came the women in white, some carrying flags, and wearing Orange sashes. The main street past the church was lined with cars and a rush line of cars, showed off Yonge St. kept coming in groups. So it was a busy, but comparatively quiet Sunday evening procession.

For the benefit of the members of the Ferguson clan who may read this column, and who were unable to join the reunion, and there are several in Newmarket, here is a brief account of the reunion.

It was held at the home of Mrs. Robert Bell, who is on the Ferguson side of the house, at Avonbank, on the banks of the Avon, renowned for its cheese factory. This is a farming community with gently rolling lands, prosperous farms and beautiful farm homes.

The Bell farm is especially spacious, with a wide shady lawn and with splendid unbroken rows of evergreen trees, and beautiful flowers. The rain had changed the plan from spreading the tables on the lawn, to having them in the large dining-room, for those "over sixty," and long tables in the shed for the younger people. It was a strawberry festival with ham and salads and all the good things to eat that could be brought together and thoroughly enjoyed by the folk who were up with the sun preparing for this event.

There was the happiest spirit evident, for this group of nearly 100 were one in harmony, very closely connected by family ties. The groups of relatives in the vicinity were there in nearly full numbers. Other groups from Shelburne, Stayner and many from Toronto were missing.

There was a list of sports conducted by the secretary, John Ferguson of Toronto, with lots of fun for everybody and a lot of prizes.

Among the contests were those in which the ladies hammered nails into a pine block, and the men drove them into a hardwood block; the ladies, blindfolded, pinned tails on, or nearly on, a horse that was pinned to a tree, the ladies tried to see which one could talk the longest, and lastly, the contest to see which one could use the most wind in the balloon blowing contest. The children had a good time with the balloons afterwards. There were other contests for the men and children.

Prof. and Mrs. U. S. Ferguson were present, guests of their cousins over the weekend. Prof. Ferguson had a birthday on Saturday so this was his party.

There was a prize for the oldest married couple present. Mr. and Mrs. Thos. Ferguson of Mitchell won that.

There was also a prize for the youngest newlyweds, won by Mr. and Mrs. Gordon Bell and one for the youngest child present. There was rivalry there, a month old and a six weeks old child competing.

But the babies did not care which one got it. Mrs. John Ferguson got the prize for having come the longest distance. Some old friends of the family were present. Arthur Wright, the veteran newspaperman, who is editor of the Mount Forest Confederate, and who is now in the centre of the front row in the photo of the newspapermen who recently visited the Globe and Mail building and enjoyed a trip north, was present. Neil Stevenson, who as a boy, helped Uncle Hugh Ferguson, head of the Avonbank family, when he first settled on his farm in Downey township, was also present.

It was a very happy reunion, and thoroughly enjoyed by all.

pay $103 to W. W. Gardhouse, county treasurer, for hospitalization for the month of May.

On motion of Councillors E. M. Legge and Thos. MacMurchy, it was decided to offer Mrs. Neinhals $10, being one-half of the price of goods supplied for an indigent who has since removed from the municipality, as final payment of her bill insofar as the council is concerned.

On the motion of Councillors C. E. Wankington and L. H. Good, the following sheep claims were paid: P. J. Whitlow, one sheep $5; W. C. Harris, three sheep, and damage done to flock, $38; J. Somerville, one sheep, two lambs, $30; Eaton Hall Farm, 12 ewes, four lambs, $144; Eaton Hall Farm, three ewes, five lambs, $72.

The clerk was instructed to have the solicitor prepare a deed for property purchased by Mr. Switzer. The council meets again on July 30.

SIR WM. MULOCK PRESENTS PRIZES

Last Friday afternoon a large number of parents and friends gathered at the public school for the closing exercises. A very nice program was given by the pupils, consisting of choruses, songs and solos.

A pleasing event took place when Sir Wm. Mulock presented the prizes he donated for the best essay on a book he presented to each pupil last Christmas, "The Secret of Heroism." Mr. Holmes of Pickering College judged the essays.

The first prize of $20 went to Grace Davis of St. Andrew's farm. The second prize, $15, went to Helen Donner of Yonge St., third prize, ten dollars, to Pauline Middlebrook, Yonge St., fourth, five dollars, was won by Bruce Buckle of Yonge St.

At the close, dainty refreshments were served by the young ladies of the school.

Miss Williamson of Markham has been engaged as teacher for another year.

The farmers are busy with the hay and all report a good crop.

Haunted Houses

By GOLDEN GLOW

Earlier in the year, I read a tiny article in the paper telling of a man advertising a new business. You'd never guess, so I may as well tell you at once! It is to chase the ghosts out of haunted houses! This was his advertisement: "Anyone having a house that is haunted or pestered so that no one can live in it, let me know. I will redeem it."

And, "Believe it or not, Bob Ripley," he had a score or more replies! What credulous people we humans are! How we do love to fool ourselves! As if there ever was or could be a ghost. And yet we all have experienced at times, just the sensation poor Job described in the Old Testament, in the 14th and following verses. That one verse alone and part of the next, "Fear came upon me and trembling, which made all my bones to shake. Then a spirit passed before my face, and the hair of my flesh stood up. It stood still, but I could not discern the form thereof: an image was before mine eyes; there was silence, and I heard a voice saying—" and so on.

However, I am not going to prove there are, or that there are not, ghosts. But I do admit there are what we call "haunted houses." Of course, a lot may just be what a person's vivid imagination conjures up, but it can be as real as reality, as we all must confess. And once a house has the name of being haunted, it never lacks persons to believe it is so.

And likewise, when the truth comes out in the case of a real "haunt," it always is revealed as some natural phenomenon, some peculiar combination of circumstances or some freak of nature. When the wind is from a certain quarter it may set in motion a portion of the cave-trough—the light from a street standard may penetrate in some peculiar way—oh, we all have read plenty of mystery stories and know the answers. However, in my own experience I can recall two, and one was told me about a family who lived in a certain house in this town. They used to see a luminous blue light in one corner of the cellar, when they went down in the dark. It was pretty spooky, I have no doubt, but they were sensible about it, and it was found to be a sort of illuminating gas, but not in sufficient quantity to be of use. Since the cellar was cemented over, it was never seen again.

The second one I recall was of a flag-staff rope that used to tap-tap, against the pole, attached to a dormer window above the spare room in a certain house. As there were stairs leading up to the attic where the dormer-window was, anyone occupying that spare room listened for the steps to descend the stairs, which, of course, they never did. It was a long time before the "haunt" was finally discovered. It resulted in the removal of the flag-staff and that ghost also was laid.

It was just about midnight while the "Twentieth Century Limited" was speeding thru the country that an absent-minded college professor left his berth in the sleeper to get a drink of ice water. Returning, he was hopelessly lost in trying to find his berth.

"Don't you remember the number of your berth?" asked the conductor.

"I'm—er—afraid not," was the reply.

"Well, haven't you any idea where it was?"

"Why, uh—oh yes, to be sure."

The professor brightened perceptibly. "I did notice one time this afternoon that the window looked out upon a little lake!"

PREVENT DISEASES

son—we have had but very few cases of scarlet fever in town during the last five years. Our town parents and teachers are so on the alert for the first case of scarlet fever to make its appearance, that what would undoubtedly be an epidemic, is cut short at the first house. Our teachers know a whole lot about these troubles and are always on the lookout for the first sign of any contagious disease. So while we recommend scarlet fever toxoid, we have not as yet been pushing it in the same way as we have the diphtheria toxoid.

Then, last of all and important too, is the smallpox vaccination. Smallpox vaccination has practically wiped out that awful disease better known years ago on account of the awful toll of lives it used to take. Late years smallpox vaccination has been neglected and it is more important than the diphtheria toxoid, because there is no cure known for smallpox.

At the time of our recent toxoiding clinics at the different town schools, we have advised strongly the smallpox vaccination but very few have realized the importance of having it done. As we are not likely to have another general school clinic for toxoiding, you are kindly asked to take your children to your family physician and have them toxoided against diphtheria, scarlet fever and smallpox. Before your little ones commence school, they should have all this work done and be able to present the doctor's certificate to the teacher that he may keep a record of their toxoiding.

If there are any children in town who cannot pay their family physician for this work the small fee he may charge, your Medical Officer of Health will be glad to take care of them free of charge—only get them done.

More important than education is that you bring up a sturdy race of men and women with pure minds, healthy bodies, and protected against the ravages of disease.

HIPPOS ROCK

of Alberta, Edmonton, was killed overseas. Since then Mrs. Mosher has spent most of her time abroad, although travel was not new to her. As a child she had travelled extensively with her mother, and she and her husband used to travel during their summer holidays.

Since 1920 she has spent four years in India, four years in Europe, five years in Africa, and has made a journey around the globe, with some time spent in China and Japan.

Mrs. Mosher travelled 16,000 miles in Africa. This included an adventurous trip up the Nile, that is, beside the Nile, into central Africa. One amusing story, although not so funny at the time, is of being in a small passenger-boat on the Nile when a hippo came up under the boat and rocked it.

"Freeze!" shouted the negro captain, and everybody kept perfectly still until the rocking of the boat subsided.

"The hippos upset the boats and the croc's pick up the passengers," said Mrs. Mosher.

"I suppose they have a working agreement," suggested Mrs. Hewson.

Mrs. Mosher told of life in central Africa where elephants sometimes ate the thatched roof of your domicile, and where curious giraffes were poking their long necks into your private affairs.

In South Africa she made a 4,000-mile trip all by herself in a motor-car.

"You can travel with more safety in South Africa than in Canada or the United States," said Mrs. Mosher. She said also that "South Africa has the best climate in the world."

She told of an overwhelming black population, well treated by the European population, but kept on vast reserves, unless employed by the Europeans.

"Blacks are not allowed in the cities after a certain hour at night," Mrs. Mosher said.

She prefers New Zealand to Australia, and then she speaks of India.

"India is the country of hungry people," the traveller said. "Although conditions are better there now, as India has taken from Japan the cotton industry, for sale in India. Labor is so cheap in India, that it was inevitable. Japan took the trade from Lancashire, and now India has taken it from Japan."

Mrs. Mosher said that India was not getting so many men from the best English families as civil servants at one time, and the result was inferior administration in India. She said that India came close to being "dirty."

And then Japan. "The people of Japan are courteous and pleasant to meet," Mrs. Mosher said. "They keep a careful check on visitors. There is always someone coming up to you on the street, asking your name, place of origin, and your business."

Mrs. Mosher spoke also of China and a 1700-mile journey up a Chinese river. In fact, she is brimming over with stories of travel and adventure. It gives her plenty to think about when, as happened recently, with some poor gasoline in the tank, car and trailer got stalled on a particularly tough hill.

THE OSTREKOFF JEWELS

By E. PHILLIPS OPPENHEIM

A GREAT NOVEL OF LOVE AND ADVENTURE

SYNOPSIS

Wilfred Haven, attaché of the American Embassy in Petrograd, leaves the Russian capital during the 1917 upheaval, carrying a fortune in jewels. The jewels have been entrusted to him for delivery in London to Princess Elisa-veta Ostrekoff as her inheritance
from Prince and Princess Ostre-koff, who are under sentence of death.

About to leave Petrograd, Haven rescues Anna Kastellane
from a fate worse than death at the hands of a Bolshevik mob.
They reach Warsaw, narrowly escaping death at the hands of Russian agents. There they outwit Polish officials, who endeavor to obtain possession of the jewels.

Anna manages to engage a plane and they find themselves in the hands of two Polish army officers, who plan to drop them at widely separated places after obtaining the jewels. Haven obtains all the revolvers on the plane and orders it landed in Odessa.

Immediately upon landing in Odessa, Anna called on Serge Zakoff, governor of the city. He admitted her instantly and recognized her as a former classmate.
Her explanation of the necessity for a permit to leave the city was satisfactory and she emerged with the signed document. The two Polish army officers arrive at the air field in time to see the plane disappear in the western sky.

CHAPTER 18

The Jewels Shake Off Death
Serenity in the skies, exaltation tempered with exhaustion, marked the first stage of that amazing return cruise. On the evening of the second day, after Olav had served them with an astonishing meal of herring soup, kasha and loaf cheese packed in wooden boxes, Haven produced his map and spread it across the table.

"Before I go up, Anna Kastel-ane," he said, "I want you to look at this with me. An hour ago we were here, so far as I could make out," he went on, indicating a strip of country south of Vienna. "We must have done something over 1,000 miles and there is no reason why we shouldn't do another thousand miles in the next 24 hours.
It isn't much of a pace, of course, but the old engine's steady and she's humming like a bird."

"It amazes me that you should understand the airplane," she remarked.

"It's the only part of real flighting that ever appealed to me," he confided. "I only hope I get back in time to finish up with our people. . . . What I was going to say is this — our nearest friendly country is Italy. We can wipe that out. We couldn't get over the mountains, and all the passes are bristling with anti-aircraft guns.
Switzerland would be even worse,
so far as the mountains are concerned, and I believe they shoot on sight any airplane seen over the country. On the other side of that — there, you see — he went on,
tapping with his pencil, "is France,
but between us and France is the whole of the German, the whole of the French and the whole of the English lines and a collection of the finest anti-aircraft guns in the world. We should be recognized as a Russian plane by the Germans and we would be down in a moment."

"What are we to do then?" she asked.

"I'm afraid there's nothing for it," he told her, "but to wheel north,
cross over a portion of Germany
by night, without lights, and come down in Holland. If we're going strong and the weather's good and we have enough petrol, we might even make England. The point is, however, that we daren't risk any of the frontiers."

Anna sighed.

"How wonderful if we could reach England," she murmured. "However, it must be just as you think best. What country are we over now?"

"Austria," he replied. "We're between Vienna and Salzburg at the present moment. What I want to do, you see, is to cross a strip of Germany in the night. They've wonderful anti-aircraft guns at Frankfurt and Mainz, but I want to go north of these and then wheel.
If we have luck and the wind keeps down, we ought to be nearing Holland at sunrise. If we can do that, bar accidents, we're safe."

One of those rare smiles flitted across her face.

"I have felt safe," she confessed,
"ever since we got rid of Esterhazy and Patinsky."

He rose to his feet thoughtfully.
"I wouldn't like to trust our present pair of cutthroats too far," he remarked, as he did his best to struggle into Esterhazy's sheepskin coat, which was several sizes too small for him. "There is just one thing more," he went on, after a moment's hesitation. "My attaché gets in my way when I'm taking over — I daren't loosen the chain up here — one lurch and it would be gone forever. There's no chance of callers here, so far as I can see.
Couldn't I leave it with you?"

"You can cover it with your coat, and sleep with your feet upon it, or perhaps put it under your pillow?"

"Of course, I will take care of it,"
she promised. "Every day since I first met you I have been longing to know how you could ever release yourself from it without a key."

"And alas, you won't know," he told her with a good-humored smile,
"until I hand it over. I've promised to let no one see the trick — not even the Archangel Gabriel, if he came down and offered to take care of it. I'll show you the message we're out of this mess, however. Excuse me."

He swung around and faced the other way for a moment. In less than ten seconds he placed the attaché in her hands.

"If you want to keep awake," he confided, "you can try fastening it on your own wrist. I'll be still trying when I come down!"

"You need not be afraid," she assured him. "I am not a very curious person and I am very sleepy."

He raised her fingers to his lips.
She gave them to him willingly enough, but though her eyes had grown kinder during the last 24 hours, her manner was more aloof.
He knew quite well that there was something still between them of trouble or suspicion. They both lacked the initiative for an explanation — he from a sort of clumsy involvement of sensations. Perhaps, he thought, as he turned reluctantly away, that night have been the supreme moment.

Instinct told him that she was craving for a few words from him,
for some indication of a larger faith in her. She might easily have invited them, but even then she hesitated. He was fighting for their lives, taking the man's part, driving the plane, of which he knew so little, through the night
over a strange country bristling with dangers. It was an adventure to which he was committed for her sake as well as his own. . . . There were a few seconds, an infinitesimal measure of time, during which she nearly called him back for the "Good night" which would have wiped out all necessity for explanations. The inspired moment passed.

There was also a similar measure of time a little later on when, with one hand upon the iron banister and the other on the handle of the door, he looked back. The room was only partially lit. The palm of one of her hands rested upon the cloak which concealed the attaché.
Her head was turned away. She was looking into the black chaos below. By chance his eyes travelled down the narrow murky passage behind. He caught a gleam of a white face, as Olav leaned out from his pantry, an evil-looking face from its sheer animalism. For a moment Haven hesitated. He felt a curious unwillingness to leave her, yet, on the other hand, she must be safe.
There was no possible harm which could come to her there. Olav was his bought slave, with nothing to gain by infidelity. Leon would be under his own control throughout the night.

Tomorrow, he told himself, crushing down that curious sense of premonition, would find them both in safety.

Haven, as he took over the control and settled down, looked about him with satisfaction. The night was clear and fine, with only a slight breeze, and an unusual absence of clouds. It seemed to him, however, glancing downward, that the lights below, evidently of a railroad track, were unusually distinct,
and he peered forward at the dial he read its record, frowning. The altitude was 200 meters below that which he had chalked up before his descent. He leaned forward to look at the compass. They were travelling very nearly due north. He changed the control swiftly and they shot upward, then he turned round to Leon who was seated there looking steadily ahead, his cap slouched down over his eyes and little of his face to be seen.

"Why didn't you keep the course
I chalked up?" Haven demanded.

"I turned to avoid a wind pocket,"
the man replied sullenly. "There's another one coming. We were flying too high."

"What rubbish are you talking about wind pockets?" Haven asked curtly. "There isn't a breath of wind or a cloud in the sky."

The man growled and pointed over his shoulder.

"Look behind, master; you will see."

Haven steeled himself with one hand and leaned toward the side of the car. Almost as he did so, some instinct prompted him not to prolong the motion. He turned back abruptly. Leon was almost bending over him.

"Why don't you look over your own side?" he demanded.

The man's eyes were fixed on the spot where the attaché was usually lying attached to Haven's arm.
He muttered something utterly indistinguishable. Behind those thick glasses, difficult though it was to recognize any expression in the saucer-like eyes, Haven could have sworn he caught a gleam of disappointment. He affected to study the course. All the time he was thinking.

Leon had deliberately altered the course and lowered the altitude. He had tried to get him, Haven, to lean over the side of the car to look for some disturbance of weather which had never existed. He had shown signs of disappointment at the fact he had come up with both hands free. He had been preparing for some sort of action a few seconds before when he, Haven, had swung around in his place. Taken singly, none of these trifling incidents
might have counted for much.
Taken all together, Haven came to a prompt but most disquieting decision. Leon had a plan. He had meant to throw him out of his place and to take over the plane.
Was he on his own or was Olav in the plot?

Haven steeled down the speed
while he reasoned the matter out.
If Olav was in the plot, Anna might be in danger. He remembered his strange fit of uneasiness as he had climbed the ladder. This might very possibly be a plot between the two. Earlier in the evening Olav, after he had served the dinner, had taken the observer's seat and stayed outside for some time.

They were servants of robbers and criminals and they were probably disposed to be robbers and criminal-as themselves with sufficient inducement. Even the great wad of thousand kronen notes which he had displayed in order to bribe them was an indiscretion. He forced himself to think the matter out carefully. The man by his side probably meant having his life.
He might be weaponless, but a weapon was barely necessary if by a swift movement he could loosen the strap and give one determined push. Well, that part of the plot, at any rate, would miscarry now.

Outwardly absorbed in his task,
he was, in reality, working his brain hard, keying up his nerves to face any possible emergency. The last few weeks had upset all his prejudices. He, who, like most big men, had never dreamed of fighting except in self-defence, and who, partly on account of his physical superiority, had found no great appetite for the mild combats of school and college, had suddenly developed a new fierceness. He would have yielded without a second's remorse to the impulse which prompted him to throw his companion from his seat to certain death if it had not been for the fact that, save himself, no one else could drive the plane. He wanted intensely to kill Leon, knowing very well that the same idea was in the other's mind. Slowly his ideas adjusted themselves. Leon must be kept alive and unsuspecting, in order that he might drive the plane.
So long as he had the stick in his hand, he would never dare to leave it.

That, it seemed to Haven, was the only advantage he had. He planned it all out in his mind — he must make some excuse to hand over the control before long and get back into the saloon. Arrived there, he must discover whether Olav was in the plot. If he was, or if there was the slightest suspicion about it, he must be dealt with promptly. There would be no trouble with Anna, he knew. She would sit calmly by and leave him to do what was necessary. He almost smiled as he realized the simplicity of his own role. He would be able to take Olav by surprise and deal with him; then he would take over control of the plane again and that would be the end of Leon. He shivered a little, but these days were toughening his sensibilities.

If they had indeed conceived a plot, they took their risk as others must do of life or death. His thoughts went wandering on. This was the crisis, he realized, of their adventure. Life and death seemed not such great things perched up there a couple of thousand feet in the air. His brain had never been clearer than it was now, as he glanced downward at the dial. He altered the course slightly, increased the altitude and took a final look around. Far away southward, mingled with the stars which hung over the horizon, he caught the occasional flash of a moving plane — probably German raiders. He himself was flying without lights, utterly invisible at his present height.
He decided that the time had come for action. He gave a little groan.
"Leon," he muttered.

"Master?" the man replied.

"I have a pain," Haven confided.

"It was the coffee which Olav made me drink. Will you take over for half an hour?"

The man nodded and unfastened
his strap.

"Don't alter the course," Haven
enjoined, without undue emphasis,
as he handed over the stick. "I'm sure you meant it for the best, but the course as it is now will take us to safety."

The change was duly effected.
Haven lingered for a moment in the observer's seat. Then he swung himself onto the iron ladder and descended step by step until he pushed open the door which led to the saloon. To his amazement the place was in darkness.

He called out.

"He fanned the air he heard a groan, but in the same instant he felt a sharp flick upon each cheek, as though he had been struck with a whip, and almost simultaneously
a suffocating sensation at the throat. His cry was stifled. He felt the blood rush to his head.
Olav's face loomed up in front of him through the darkness.

"If master struggles," he threatened, "I will pull the cord lighter. One more pull and master will be dead."

For a moment life surged away — even his tongue was powerless. He lost consciousness.

Haven opened his eyes upon what seemed to him at first some ghastly nightmare. He was lying upon the floor of the saloon and his arms,
from his wrists to his shoulders,
were bound to his body with strips of dried and unsecured leather. His ankles were secured in similar fashion. More horrible still, around his neck, with a slip knot, was a strip of the same leathern material.

Olav, who was seated on a chair
by his side, gave a playful little tug at the loose end and the agony at his throat recommenced. Opposite to him, in the most distant of the armchairs, was Anna, also bound hand and foot and groaning feebly. Her eyes were pools of horror. She called out to him piteously.

"This man is a devil — a devil," she repeated. "Why did we not kill him, Wilfred Haven? We should have killed both of them while we had the chance."

Olav chuckled and gave a further pull at the cord which he held, so that Haven almost shrieked with the agony of it.

"Yes, yes, it would have been well to kill us!" he cried. "Now we must kill you. We throw you over when we come to the water. Water is safest. Perhaps I throw you over first." He went on, looking down at Haven. "I talk a little to the lady afterward. Yes?"

The man shook with laughter.
Notwithstanding his bound legs and hands and the tightening of the strip of dried leather around his throat, Haven struggled to rise.
Olav, with a laugh, drew tighter still the thong and Haven collapsed upon the floor.

"Do not let him do that," Anna moaned. "It is terrible! I am thinking hard," she went on in English. "What fools we were to give them this chance! We must bargain for our lives now. What is there that we can offer them?
They know about the jewels already."

"I am rich," Haven reminded her.
"Try and make him understand that," Anna enjoined. "Do not look at me," she begged. "Whatever you do, do not look at me.
Try to keep his attention, if you can."

Haven tightened his lips and did as he was bidden. Nevertheless, even when he withdrew his eyes to look at Olav, he understood the meaning of the queer little noise that he had heard, in spite of the roar of the engine when first he had recovered consciousness. Anna had evidently discovered a portion of the brass clasp of the window which had a jagged edge, and she was rubbing the cord which bound her wrists steadily against it.

Already her hand was covered with blood where she had slipped. Haven played his part. Fortunately,
Olav understood his scanty Russian better than the other man.

"Listen, Olav," he argued. "You think you will get rid of us and that the jewels I carry, of which you heard from your master, will make you and Leon rich. You are wrong. You make a great mistake.
You could earn great wealth, but not with those jewels. Slacken that cord a little or I can talk no more."

Olav obeyed at once. There was incredulity and also anxiety in his blue eyes.

"The jewels are the Ostrekoff jewels," he declared. "They are famous throughout the world.
They would make a whole town rich. With you and the woman at the bottom of the water, the jewels are ours. How could we be wealthier?"

"You have no brains, Olav," Haven scoffed, speaking as slowly
as possible and struggling desperately to keep his eyes from the other side of the saloon. "You do not understand."

"Every one of those jewels is famous. Where will you sell? You might go to Constantinople, to Paris, to New York, to Buenos Aires, to Berlin, and when you showed the stones, you would be asked the same question — 'How did you come by these?' And when you told your foolish story, for I have no doubt that it would be a foolish story, they would shake their heads and say — 'Sell those to some other jeweller.' Shall I tell you why, Olav?"

"Yes, you can tell me why if you will," the man replied stolidly, "but that does not mean that I believe.
We are going to take the jewels — Leon and I — and you and the woman will be at the bottom of the water."

To be continued

"But I thought—" began the typist, meekly.

"It's not your business to think,"
snapped the manager.

"Just you take down what I say,
word for word, and keep your own ideas to yourself."

So that afternoon the following letter was brought to him to sign.

"Dear Mr. Browne—Write it with an 'e'. Pure swank—his father was a gardener. With regard to your letter, of whatever date it was, I can quote you the following prices. H. Thompson.
It's that outsider Browne. How much shall we stick on? Twenty per cent? Make it 30? Righto.
Thirty dollars a ton. Awaiting your esteemed order, I am, yours truly. That's settled him."

HOLT DRIVER KILLED AS CAR HITS TRUCK

A sad accident occurred 1 1/2 miles west of Holt early Sunday morning, when John McConvey, 22, of Barton Ave., Toronto, returning from a weekend at Jackson's Point, met instant death when his light touring car crashed into a heavy milk truck, owned by Carman Rolling, Mount Albert.

McConvey was pinned behind the steering wheel of his demolished car. The truck was badly damaged and turned on its side by the head-on impact and its load of milk cans scattered about the road. The driver, Ernest Rolling of Mount Albert, escaped with bruises and cuts. The touring car was reduced to a twisted mass of wood and metal.

McConvey died of a broken neck, according to coroner Dr. L. W. Dales of Newmarket, who was summoned. Constable Jardine investigated. It is thought that McConvey fell asleep at the wheel. An inquest will be held on July 7.

"Dear Friends:
"It is with sincere regret that our little gathering here tonight means that we must terminate a pastorate which to us has been both pleasant and profitable.

"During the four years that we have spent together as pastor and people, you have taught us many lessons, not only from the excellent sermons you have given us each Sunday, but your daily life has been an example which we would do well to follow.

"We are happy to know that your new home is to be not too far distant and as the motors seem to have done much to shorten distances, we hope to often see you in our community and we assure you that you will always find our doors open to you and that you will receive a very hearty welcome whenever you find an opportunity to visit us.

"As a very slight token of our respect and in memory of the happy times we have spent together, we ask you to accept these little lamps and may they brighten a corner in your new home at Minnesing.

President's "Double" Comes To Help Stranded Travellers

Wheat Crop Promises Record Yield; Fear Low Prices

BY LEONARD HARMAN

"What you got in the back of the car? Just camping equipment?" It was the customs official who inspected us as we entered the State of Michigan. When we readily assured him that that was all, he cheerfully made out our touring permit.

The rear part of the car did contain a whole house and household effects. There were tent, beds, bedding, table, chairs, stove, and utensils. With parking space and level ground six feet by eight, we could pitch our tent anywhere.

The first night was spent at a tourist camp in a pleasant little village half way between Toledo and Columbus. In the wee small hours we were awakened by a rattling and jerking of wires and a regular measured sound like the tread of giant feet. I stuck out my head to see by the clear moonlight a cow reaching through the wire fence to acquire mouthful after mouthful of the long grass.

There is some grand country north of Columbus. Great fields of fall wheat are fully in head. Clover has a rank growth. For miles at a stretch one may see attractive farm homes each with a great red barn behind it. In places the crop land is broken here or there by a lime quarry. And underneath the wheat and lime are stores of oil. Talk about natural resources!

The farmers are afraid of their wheat crop which threatens to be of record yield. They face the curse of plenty with its disastrous farm prices. The people say that business is bad; very bad. Estimates of the unemployed range from twelve million up. There are certainly more people unemployed in the United States than there are people in Canada altogether. But the country appears prosperous with its natural resources, its huge factories and its new automobiles.

If we had had one of their new automobiles we might not have met the man who could pass as a double for Franklin Delano Roosevelt. Our older model had developed several coughing spells. When we left the office of the Ohio Farm Bureau to seek camping ground at the suburbs of Columbus, we were met with a stubborn refusal to move. There was nothing for it but to phone for the auto doctor.

Presently a great fish-like machine was seen approaching. In large letters it bore the information: "Gibbert's Garage, Tugboat Annie." It came to a stop in the midst of the traffic and down from its steering stepped a man with unmistakable Rooseveltian features. With calm assurance he crossed the street in our direction to be met by one of the numerous policemen who look quite fierce with big clubs in their hands and big pistols in their belts. At a reassuring word from F. D. R. the Second, the officer retreated. F. D. R. deposited his tools beside our car and returned to remove Tugboat Annie from the forbidden zone.

The newspapers of the country, most of which seem very critical of President Roosevelt, if not actually hostile to him, have been featuring cartoons of the "pump-priming" efforts by which the administration is pouring money into circulation in the hope of inducing the old economic machine to get going again.

True to the president's style, F. D. R. the Second began pump-priming operations on our auto's gas line. After a great deal of this activity, circulation was restored and the machine turned merrily.

When we received our bill we were quite ready to agree with the newspapers that pump-priming is an expensive process.

After four days in Indianapolis we headed for Purdue University at Lafayette. We arrived just in time for a great conference of 4H boys and girls. The 4H clubs correspond somewhat to the Junior Farmers and Junior Institutes but serve a younger age group. In the same movement is the Future Farmers of America, which serves an older age group. Eight hundred of these teen-age boys and girls from the farms of Indiana had met for competition in various classes. There were the stock and crop sections and the domestic science branches. Health was a field in which there was keen competition, with some of the entries scoring over 99 per cent, according to the ratings of medical experts.

But on our way to Purdue we spent a night at a farm home as guests of Mr. and Mrs. Hassil Schenck. Mr. Schenck is president of the Indiana Farm Bureau, a farm co-operative movement to which 30,000 farmers each pay their annual membership of $5. In case you consider the family name unusual, we might mention that there are less English, Irish and Scotch names down here, though we have seen a Bennett, a Scott and a Michael McGovern. We met a Smith but we also met a Schmidt.

All these people seem to have embraced the American adaptation of British language and cusoms, even the camp of children beside which we are at present waiting for an educational meeting. We have been speculating about them and think that they are Greek. The whole question is complicated by overhearing visiting parents talk about attending a wedding this evening. If you know what racial and religious groups get married on Sunday night, you may be able to solve the problem.

While at the Schenck home we had quite an introduction to Indiana farming. I had a chance to walk with my six foot host through his fields. There was a carload of nice Hereford heifers and 60 Shropshire sheep as well as 100 Hampshire hogs. The Hampshires, black pigs with white belts, are more of a bacon type than some other corn-belt breeds. But when they have been fed corn on the cob they carry a load of fat. We saw some in the great Indianapolis stockyards which approached 300 pounds. There is not as much discrimination against overweight as in Ontario, nor is there a clearly defined system of government grading. We bought a little bacon yesterday and after the fat had been fried off we could hardly find the remainder. But corn is supposed to produce meat in hams and shoulders.

The great fields of corn are worked usually by tractors. The farmers here are said to be machinery-mad. Even men with 50-acre farms have bought new tractors. Some use wide weeders of a rotary hoe type. Others have scuffler attachments which fasten right on the frame of the tractor and cultivate four rows at a time. Whatever the implement, the natives call this tillage "plowing corn."

But I'm jumping around with my paragraphs; no doubt it is the effect of travel. Let us return to Purdue where we had some difficulty in getting much information. A farm girl, working in the office of agricultural administration at Lafayette, gave her opinion that there were a lot of people around there who thought they were educated; and the thought seemed too much for them. But we did have a nice chat with the man who is in charge of the university's broadcasting radio station.

They give real courses in radio there and train the students in broadcasting.

From Purdue we went to a conference of co-operative managers of the State of Indiana. Some hundred of them, each with wife attached, were gathered to discuss their problems. One day of the conference gave us an understanding of what they were trying to do, so we set out for Chicago. Before we left Lake Manitowish we saw a field containing 100 mule colts. Indiana uses a lot of mules but one seldom sees them other than full grown. A hundred of them, grazing, rolling and occasionally fighting, made quite an interesting herd.

END OF THE RIVER

BY GOLDEN GLOW

That panoramic view of the end of the Holland River as it flows into Cook's Bay, the southern end of Lake Simcoe, as you see it from that hill on highway No. 11 just beyond Bradford, has always fascinated me. You see the Newmarket branch and the Bradford branch join company, and go on together to mingle their waters with those of beautiful Lake Simcoe. The Holland River winds slowly through miles of low-lying swamp where nothing but marsh grass grows. I think it is a unique sight, for you do not often see anything like that.

The view of the River Wye from the lookout at Marty's Shrine, Midland, is somewhat similar, but there are many more trees and in the latter, this latter view I speak of shows the river as it winds along with nothing to break the flatness of the surrounding terrain for miles.

You get the view mainly from the top of the hill I mentioned—I am referring of course to what you see from our highways—for you get only an occasional glimpse of the river from the road leading up to the east side of Lake Simcoe, the road through Sharon and Queensville.

How I wish I were a man sometimes so I could go exploring into all sorts of "hooks and crannies" of places like that! Women and girls as a general rule haven't the strength or the physique to endure too much of nature at one dose.

I have often thought I'd like to follow our Newmarket branch of the Holland River right up to its mouth. We used to skate down the creek past Peter Pearson's Crossing, nearly to Aurora, so we got nearly to the source, but never quite all the way to the fountain head.

However, when the famous Newmarket canal was in progress of construction, we followed it nearly to Holland Landing for there were extensive cement works all along the way. What a pity it could not have been finished—it would have been a wonderful asset to our town in the way of boating (if not ship-tourist trade which now passes us by. To be able to go up to Lake Simcoe in canoes, boats, motor launches, would have meant holidays for folks who now have to remain at home.

Well! I am wandering from my subject, I see, so get back to it. The reason of my writing about it at all, was because of a letter asking me if we had been on any new trips lately—something quite different. I am always getting letters asking me about pleasant trips, something off the beaten track.

We had been to Springwater Park, northwest of Barrie at Midhurst, and if you want to have an "al fresco" meal in ideal surroundings just take a drive up there.

It is a reforestation area, as no doubt you know, with mostly pines, red, white, and jack pine, and how those pines have grown since first we visited it, five or six years ago. It will soon be a forest! The place, as the name signifies, is full of springs, which have been utilized to form artificial lakes, or should I say ponds—little streams with water-wheels and waterfalls. There are beautiful rockeries, waterlily pools, shrubs. And flowers and walks with ample accommodation for picnic parties.

On our return we went down to Alcona Beach and there again are wonderful improvements with a splendid large pavilion with a seating capacity of 250, or more, at the well-built tables. We came south along the road leading through Lerroy and Gifford and I never saw so many gorgeous chestnut trees all in full bloom. While not exactly near the Lake, you could see it practically all the time. We finally had to go back to highway No. 11, and wondered where we would find ourselves. We were just north of Coulson's Corners, where a pretty little red brick cottage has been converted into a service station. There are wonderful farms all along the road, and I thoroughly enjoyed the new experience.

So if you want a pleasant ride with good gravel roads, I would recommend that trip.

A chap, after placing some flowers on a grave in the cemetery, noticed an old Chinaman placing a bowl of rice on a nearby grave and asked: "What time do you expect your friend to come up and eat the rice?" Replied the old Chinaman: "Same time your friend come up to smell flowers."

A paid-in-advance subscription list means a better local newspaper.

A GREAT AUDIENCE TO SPEAK TO

Suppose a man should come to you some day and say: "Here, Mr. Merchant, I have just hired a great hall, and I have seated in that hall over 1,000 families and I have arranged so that you can have a place on the platform, to stand up before that vast audience and tell your business story." Would you say that was the chance of a lifetime? Would you not put aside every other duty in order to be able to make a speech to that audience that would make them rise and cheer and rain dollars at your feet?

Summed up, that is just what The Newmarket Era is offering you. It is offering you the audience of its readers. You can make that your audience. You can make that audience look to you for its merchandise necessities and luxuries if you make your talk such as to win the confidence and esteem of that audience.

When you do that you are doing advertising, and the cost of doing it in that way is small
